

Conflict Materials Statement

In July 2010, the United States Congress passed legislation requiring companies to report the use of “Conflict Minerals” in the manufacture of their products. “Conflict Minerals” in this context refer to specific minerals originating from mines controlled by armed groups in the Democratic Republic of Congo or adjoining countries.

Capital Electric Wire & Cable Company is committed to complying with this legislation and plans to comply with forthcoming regulations to enable designation of all Capital Electric supplied products as “Conflict Free”.

Based on our purchasing policy and supplier selection, the tin that Capital Electric purchases for distribution purposes is produced from conflict-free smelters. These smelters are not located in the area of conflict, nor do they receive tin concentrate from conflict regions.

Further to the action mentioned, Capital Electric will take the appropriate actions to fully comply with the regulations regarding conflict minerals and will support efforts by its customers to reach our common goal to build a socially and responsible supply chain.

Should you have any questions or need additional information regarding this policy, please contact me directly at 262-788-9700.

Sincerely,

Mike Harpster
President
